

Lesson Authoring Tips: Creative Uses of the Table Activity

As the CL-150's Lesson Authoring tool continues to evolve, the more possibilities you have when creating your language lessons. To help you make the most of those possibilities, we're tapping the collective expertise and creativity of the CL-150 instructor community in a series of Lesson Authoring tips. This time, let's cover one of our newest activities: Table.

As you might expect, Table lets you make... tables! You can create a table from scratch or upload a table from an Excel spreadsheet or Word doc. Formatting tools allow you to edit text color and cell color, and formatting will carry over from Excel or Word if importing.

Table allows you to blank out certain cells (or parts of cells!) that the learner must then fill in. The possibilities are vast if you're willing to think outside the table.

How are instructors using Table?

Grammar Practice

When you think of tables, you probably think of grammar—indeed that is the most common application of Table. Below is an example of using Table to demonstrate verb-adjective agreement. Learners must fill in the corresponding noun and adjective to match the translation provided in the first column.

Fill the blanks with answers from the right

In Spanish, adjectives must agree with the noun (or pronoun) they describe in gender. Feminine adjectives describe feminine nouns, and masculine adjectives describe masculine nouns. Complete the table below with the appropriate noun and its adjective.

English Noun Phrase	Spanish Noun	Spanish Adjective
sticky rice	el arroz	pegajoso
a generous amount	una cantidad	generosa
a medium pot	_____	_____
a clean towel	_____	_____
authentic paella	_____	_____

- una toalla
- limpia
- auténtica
- una olla
- la paella
- mediana

Fill in the Blank

Table allows you not only to blank out certain cells, but certain words within a single cell. This flexibility can transform Table into a fill-in-the-blank activity where learners are expected to produce vocabulary or grammar patterns in the context of a sentence, as seen below.
