

Using CL-150 lessons synchronously in the virtual classroom

CL-150 lessons aren't just for independent learning or pre-class prep work. Language instructors, as you shift to virtual instruction, consider using lessons collaboratively during class time as well.

Want to get your students talking? Help them produce the language in different contexts? Think critically about target language texts or videos? Practice grammar? Discuss culture? No matter what your classroom goals are, there's a CL-150 learning activity to support the task at hand.

Check out this video playlist created by our instructors to find the right CL-150 learning activities for your classroom goals. Each 3-5 minute video features one learning activity available in most CL-150 lessons (including CL-150 Cohort lessons)—our instructors suggest unique ways to leverage that activity in class to better engage students in the language and culture.

Slide Show

Your students can do so much with this activity, from making predictions and summarizing the information to identifying new vocabulary... the possibilities are endless.

Reading Comprehension

How do you get students to participate in class discussions? Ask them to brainstorm answers to the comprehension questions and discuss their opinions. Go beyond comprehension by having students summarize the text in their own words or transform it by using more challenging tenses.
