

Close your rings, learn a language

What are you lookin' at?

Oh, the new learner portal design in the CL-150!? Us too. ?

Goodbye moody world map background. Hello clean new dashboard.

The new look reduces distractions. Color-coded progress rings help learner can focus on what matters most:

- ✓ Completing your next assignment or Cohort lesson.
- ✓ Meeting your weekly or monthly requirements.
- ✓ Reviewing your Learned Vocab regularly.

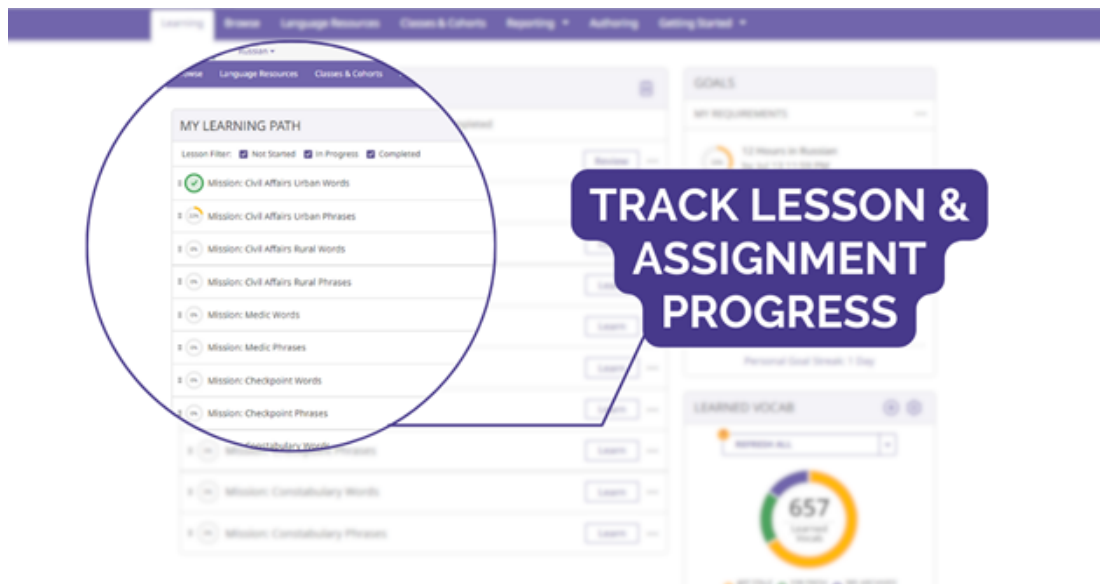

It's like closing the fitness rings on your Apple watch, but for language learning.

Ring 1: Learn something new

You'll now see progress rings next to every lesson on your path (Cohort lessons, class assignments, assessments, etc.)

It's easier to see what you've completed. What you're working on now. And what to work on next.

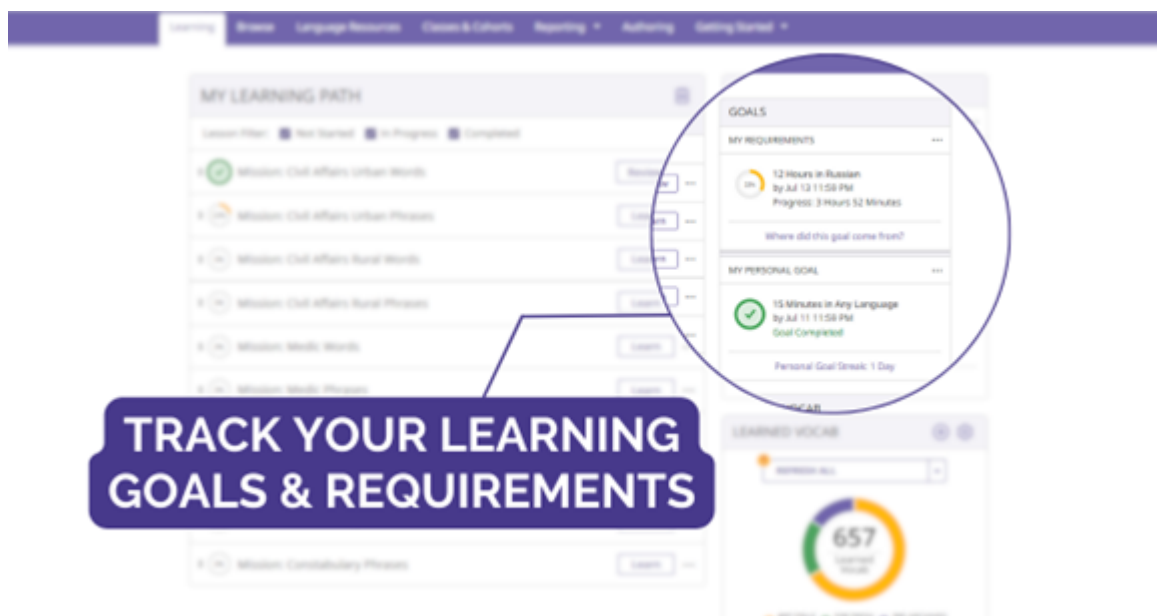

Green = done. Yellow = in progress. Grey = not started. You can use the filters at the top to hide any of those states from your path.

Ring 2: Make daily progress to meet weekly or monthly goals

Progress rings everywhere! See how much time you have left to complete your weekly or monthly learning goal assigned by your program admin. And track your progress towards a daily goal you set for yourself.

Yellow = in progress. Green = +1 for your daily learning streak.

Ring 3: Review your vocab regularly

The third progress ring (to rule them all): your Learned Vocab freshness. If you're not reviewing what you've learned, are you even learning it?

Green = good, you know these words. Yellow = you've got vocab that needs review. Purple = vocab you've archived.

Keep the ring completely green and purple to be confident you've really mastered all that new vocab.

And we mean all your vocab. You can now add your own custom vocab right from your dashboard by clicking on the + icon.

Log in now to start closing those rings and crushing your language goals.
